Vienna, January 3.

ON New Year's Day Lieutenant General Heiſter, Son of General Heiſter, arriv'd here; and brought a particular Account of a Victory gain'd over the Malecontents of Hungary by the Imperial Army commanded by his Father, the 26th of laſt Month, near Tirnau. The moſt material Circumſtances of that Action, are theſe. General Heiſter, being joyn'd the 21ſt of December by all the Imperial Troops that he expected to reinforce him, march'd towards Boſing the 22d, near which Place they perceiv'd 3000 Horſe of the Malecontents; the General advancing againſt them with his Vanguard, caus'd 2 Cannon-ſhot, to be made at them; one of which killing a Collonel of the Malecontents, the reſt fled. In the Evening the Imperialiſts enter'd Boſing, having by the way made themſelves Maſters of a place call'd St. George and put the Malecontents they found in it to the Sword. The 23d our Army lay ſtill to give ſome Reſt to the Cavalry, part of which having march'd hard ſeveral days together was much fatigued. That day the General receiv'd Intelligence that the Malecontents had drawn moſt of their Troops into a Body, and were reſolv'd to ſtand a Battle with him. The 24th the Army leaving their heavy Baggage at Boſing march'd to Modern. The 25th they advanc'd to Roſenthal, a Village within a League of Tirnau, encamp'd there and had Intelligence brought them that the Malecontents were not far off. The 26th as ſoon as 'twas Light, our Army march'd on in 2 Columns, the Troops being diſpos'd in the ſame Order they were to fight in. They march'd about a Mile and a half, and were in ſight of a Village call'd Batmariz, when a Party of Huſſars ſent out to get Intelligence, gave notice that the Malecontents were on the other ſide that Village. General Heiſter caus'd the Army to move forwards on the Left of the Village, juſt beyond which appear'd 3000 of the Malecontents commanded by Count Berezeni; and not much further the Main Army of the Malecontents commanded by Prince Ragotski ſtood drawn up in Order of Battle on a riſing Ground; and the 3000 Men with Count Berezeni retir'd to them. The Imperialiſts advanc'd towards them, but having 2 Ditches that were frozen over, and alſo a Bridge to paſs, they could not form themſelves into a proper Order of Battle, before the Malecontents charg'd them; at the ſame time ſo thick a Snow fell that they could hardly ſee 200 Paces before them. The Imperialiſts mov'd to the Left towards Tirnau, with deſign to preſent their Front to the Malecontents; but their Left Wing was attack'd in Flank by ſeveral Thouſand Horſe, before half their Line had paſs'd the 2 Ditches: Their Cannon fir'd upon thoſe Horſe and made them retire. Then the whole Line of the Imperialiſts paſs'd the Ditches, and advanc'd near the Enemy, who were drawn up cloſe in one Line twice as long as that of the Imperialiſts and in the Form of a Half Moon. They had the advantage of the higher Ground, and the Wind drove the Snow in the Faces of our Men: They firſt fired upon the Imperialiſts with 14 Pieces of Artillery, which were levell'd againſt their main Body; and then fell upon them in that Part with the choiceſt of their Infantry: The Battallion of Woſſen after they had made one Diſcharge, gave way before them, as did alſo a Squadron of Sileſian Recruits. Some of the Malecontents Grenadiers, who were Frenchmen and 120 in Number, with 400 Foot, and ſeveral Thouſand Tolpatzes, puſh'd forward, kill'd many of the Imperial Foot that retir'd diſorderly before them, and made a great Slaughter among the Servants and others that follow'd the Imperial Army and were behind the main Body with the Ammunition and Baggage Waggons.

At the ſame time, ſome of the beſt of the Hungarian Horſe attack'd our Right Wing in Flank, and broke into it in 2 Places; doing great Execution upon the Battallion of the great Maſter of the Teutonick Order, the Lieutenant Collonel of which Battallion, Baron Wachtendonk, was mortally wounded. The Hungarians having thus broken into our Right Wing, and ſeparated one part of it from the other, were in a fair way to carry the Victory; but their Right Wing did not attack our Left, with that Succeſs their Left and Centre did our Right and Main Body; The Regiments of Cuiraſſiers of la Tour, Cuſani, and Bareith, poſted on our Left, ſuſtain'd the Charge of the Hungarian Cavalry manfully, and repuls'd them ſo vigorouſly, that 1000 of them being kill'd, the reſt fled; Whereupon their Foot being expos'd fell into Diſorder, and a general Rout quickly enſued. 3000 Malecontents were kill'd, and 3000 Tolpatzes threw down their Arms and had Quarter given them. But it was in vain for any Perſon that was diſcover'd to be a German, Frenchman, or other Forreigner, to beg Quarter; all ſuch were put to the Sword: Only Monſieur de Verville's Character ſav'd him, for he was ſpar'd upon his crying out that he was an Envoy to Prince Ragotski from the King of France. Monſieur de Coulon the Bavarian Envoy to that Prince was kill'd in the Fight. Among the Malecontents was a Battallion of French; of whom few if any eſcap'd out of the Battle. The Imperialiſts took 17 Pieces of Cannon and 2 Mortars, Prince Ragotski's Baggage, and 51 Standards or Colours. In the Heat of the Fight, a Battallion of Germans, Deſerters and others, whom the Malecontents had forc'd into their Service, came over to the Imperialiſts, and facilitated their Victory. We loſt but 4 or 500 Men in this Action. Prince Ragotski retir'd from the Battle to Leopolſtad with a few Troops, and ſummon'd the Governour of that Place, (which had been block'd up a long time, and was lately beſieg'd in Form by Prince Ragotski, who left ſome Forces before it, when he joyn'd the Counts Berezeni and Eſterhaſi, and made up the Army that was defeated at Tirnau,) to ſurrender; telling him General Heiſter's Army was routed. But that Trick not paſſing upon the Governour, the Prince broke up the Siege, and retir'd towards Nitria, leaving behind him 10 battering Pieces and 7 Mortars. General Heiſter was at Tirnau the 28th, refreſhing his Men, and preparing to paſs the Waag as yeſterday.

Young Count Heiſter, who we ſaid brought the Particulars of this Action, came into this City with 4 Poſt Chaiſes; in the firſt ſat himſelf and an Officer; in the 2d another Officer with ſeveral Standards dards and Colours taken from the Malecontents; in the 3d the French Priſoner Monſ. de Verville, (who it ſeems commanded the Infantry of the Malecontents in the Battle,) over againſt whom ſat 2 Soldiers with drawn Swords; and in the 4th were more Standards and Colours. In this Order they paſs'd to the Imperial Palace, and while Count Heiſter was gone up to the Emperor, and was entertaining him with the Relation of the Victory his Troops had gain'd, Monſieur de Verville ſat in the Court Yard 2 Hours together expos'd to the Crowd, who took him to be a juſt ſubject of Reproach and Deriſion, and were very liberal of courſe Language to him.

General Forgats, one of the chief Leaders of the Malecontents, was not in this Action. He was gone to Tranſilvania and had ſat down before Hermanſtad with a Body of Troops and 6 Pieces of Cannon; but by an Expreſs that arriv'd yeſterday from Peterwaradin we learn, that General Rabutin who was in Hermanſtad having made a vigorous Sally upon the Beſiegers, has beaten and put them to the Rout with great Loſs, and taken their 6 Pieces of Cannon.

'Tis advis'd from Italy, that the Pope's Troops in the Ferrareze have oppos'd the Detachment of Imperialiſts ſent by Count Leinlngen to attempt the Relief of Mirandola, and have prevented the Execution of that Deſign.

London, January 10.

The following Letter (which we conceive to be ſufficiently vain) having been printed at Paris, and tranſmitted hither from Holland; will, 'tis hop'd, at this Juncture, be of ſome Entertainment to the Publick.

From on board the Eclatant in the Road of Cadix, Dec. 4.

Monſieur de Pointis arriv'd here the 2d of this Month. The ſame day he made a Viſit to the Duke de Brancas who is Governour of this Place, and to Don Hernando Nunnez General of the Gallies; and was ſaluted with a Diſcharge of 9 Pieces of Cannon. All poſſible Diligence is uſed to fit out the Squadron, and Monſieur de Ricouart and I have Buſineſs enough. All our Ships are in the Road, except the Vermandois and the Diamant, who will joyn us tomorrow, with the Gallions, the biggeſt of which came into the Road this Morning. Monſieur de Pointis has order'd the whole Squadron to be ready to ſail the 6th of this Month; but I believe we may lye a day at Anchor in the great Road, to finiſh our Preparations for an Engagement; and then we ſhall ſet Sail, Match in Hand, to pay a Viſit to the Engliſh and Dutch, who at preſent are anchor'd at Cape Carnero in Order of Battle, which makes us hope they will wait our coming. I am of Opinion Monſieur de Pointis has reſolv'd to lay them aboard directly; for having had the Honour to Dine with him this day, I heard him ſay to the Count de Bethune and 3 or 4 Captains who were preſent, that there was a Neceſſity of puſhing boldly, for he foreſaw the Action would be hot and ſoon over. Monſieur de Feuquieres, one of our Captains, goes aboard the General of the Gallions, with a French Pilot and Gunner; and if the General will leave his Ship to the Conduct of Monſieur de Feuquieres, he may be certain of Glory. The reſt of the Gallions deſire likewiſe to have ſome French Officers on board, which I ſuppoſe Monſieur de Pointis will not refuſe; for the Spaniards ſeem to be very hearty in this Buſineſs, to our great Satisfaction. We ſhall have with us a Privateer of St. Malo carrying 30 Guns, commanded by Monſieur de la Monerie, who has voluntarily offer'd his Service to Monſieur de Pointis.

I believe in few days we ſhall not feel the Winter, but ſhall be thoroughly warm'd. When we have beaten the Enemy, we count Gibraltar ours. The Breach is conſiderable, and the Marquis de Villadarias will ſummon the Prince of Darmſtad to ſurrender as ſoon as we appear; Which if refus'd, he will immediately make a general Aſſault, for which he is preparing. I am, &c.

Acted but once theſe Ten Years.
